Home

The home page is the first screen shown after logging in and will display key information about the user at the top of the page and then followed by a list of that particular user's habits. At the bottom of each page is the navigation bar which allows users to navigate to the other sections of the app which pertain to forum, calendar, and notifications. In particular the top section displays the userID and the follower and following count which are other users with their own habits.

The central information on the page is a list of habits for that particular user. Each habit will have a data and tag. The tag is some small description of the category of the habit. Furthermore, each habit can be commented on, shared or liked. A new habit can be created for the user by tapping the plus icon at the bottom right which will navigate users to the add habit screen to enter information regarding the new habit The home page allows navigation to the followers and following pages by clicking on the following or followers sections of the page. Clicking a habit will open a screen to view the habit and edit any fields.
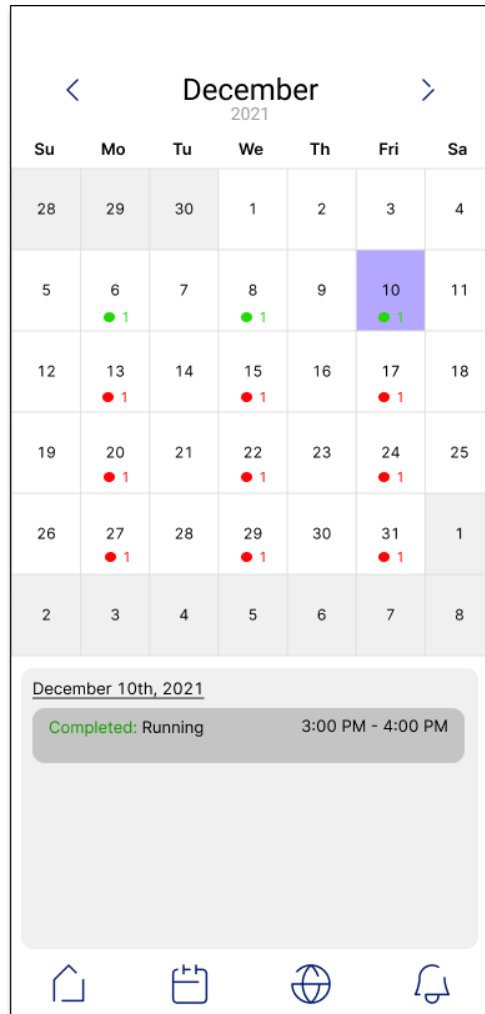

Calendar

This screen is accessible from the navigation bar by the second button from the left and is a visual representation of a single user's habits over the course of a month. The first half of the screen shows an actual calendar with the current day being highlighted when first accessed. The user can tap a different day or change the month using the two arrows above. The one to the right will go a month to the future and the one to the left will go a month back at a time. On the calendar there are color coded indications for habits. Green means that that habit has been completed as scheduled and red indicates that it has not. By default, all events happening on future dates will remain red until the scheduled time when a user can set them to complete. On the lower half of the screen, the box will show the day currently being highlighted or selected and any habits for that day. If there are none, it will be blank. If there is a habit for that day it will show the completion status, the title of the habit and the scheduled time. A user may tap a habit to view more details, edit or delete a habit. If it is clicked, it will bring up the Update/View/Edit/Delete Habit Event fragment as outlined on Figma. From here the user will be able to manipulate the habit event as they choose and choose save, cancel or the trash can to delete the event all together. Save and Cancel will return the user to the calendar screen whereas the trashcan will bring up the delete confirmation fragment. Here, both "Yes" and "No" will return the user to the calendar.

| Followers	4
User #1	FOLLOWING
User #2	FOLLOW
User #3	FOLLOW
User #4	FOLLOWING
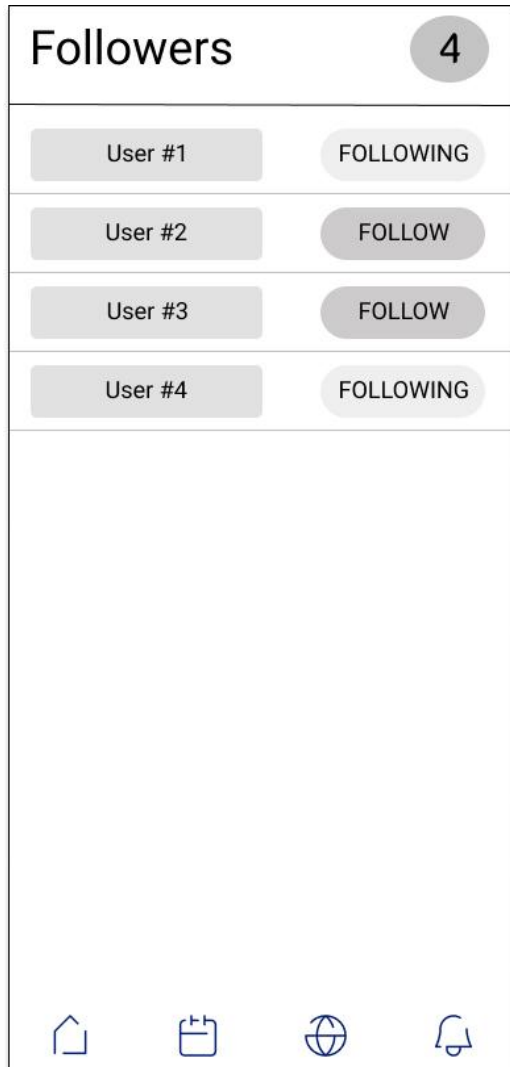

Followers/Following

To get to these pages, tap on the followers or following components on the primary user's page.

The followers page displays the people who are following the user. It will also show whether the user is following those individuals. If "follow" appears next to a person's name, it means the user isn't following them and can't observe their habits. The user can choose to follow that person if they are interested.

The following page, on the other hand, shows all of the people the user follows. By tapping on the name of another user, their profile can be accessed.
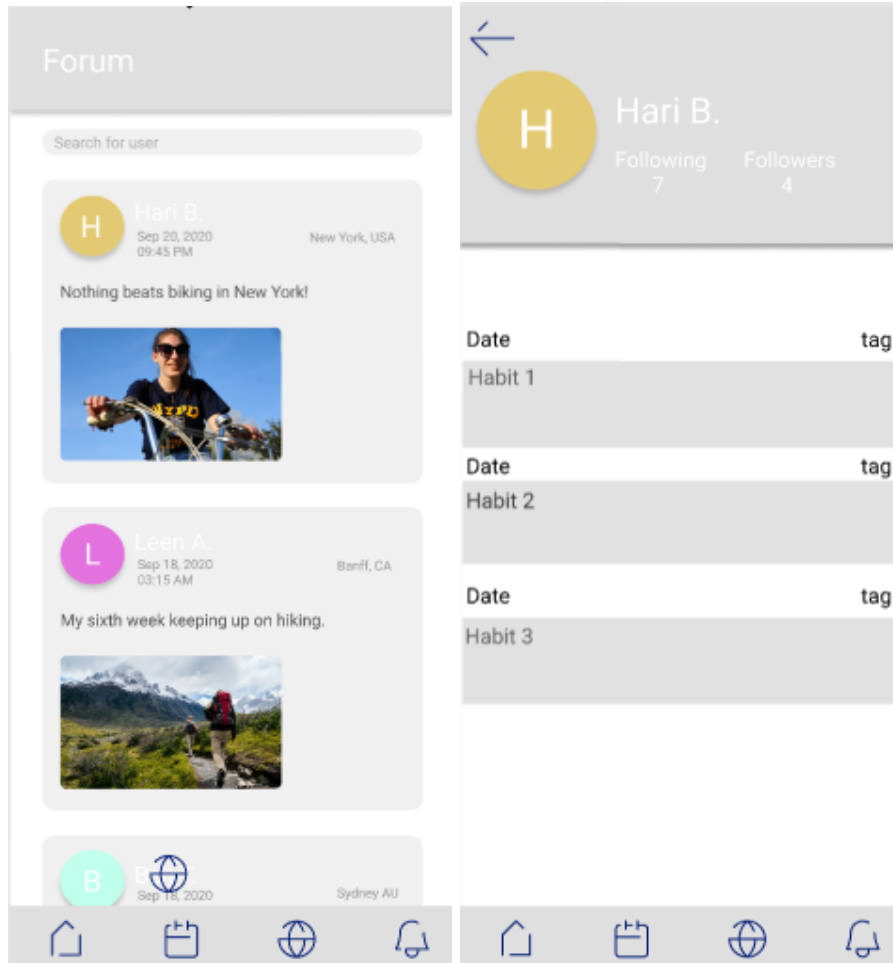

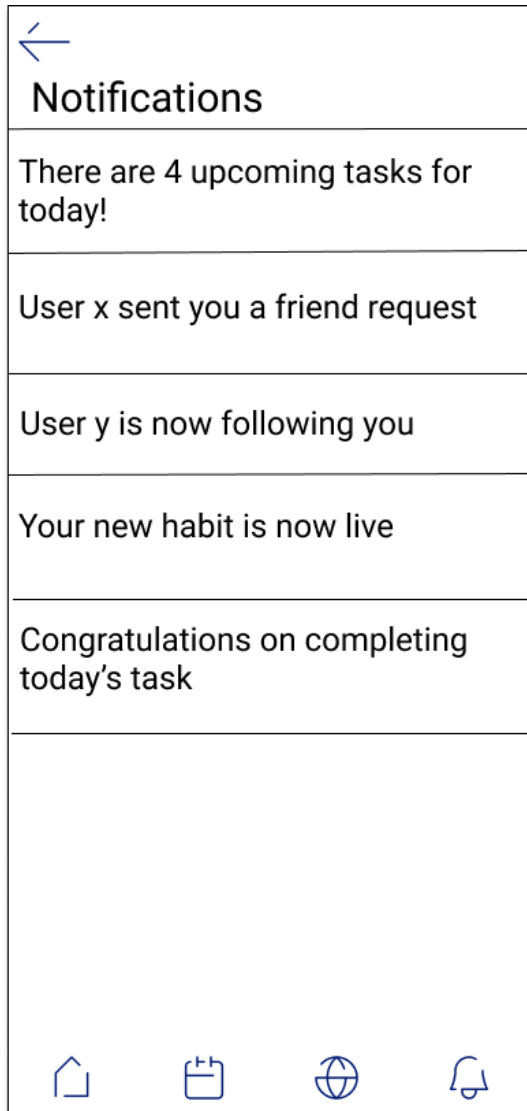

Forum and other users' profiles

First page:

The forum can be accessed by clicking the globe in the navigation bar at the bottom (from any other screen that contains it), it shows the posts that other users (who the user follows) chose to share.

Posts can contain text, images, and location (must at least contain an image or a text), it additionally always displays the date of the post (day and time local to the user), and by who the post is made. The page is scrollable (shows more posts the further down it goes)

One can search for a user (if they exist on the app) by typing in the name in the search bar and a list of close matches shows up

One can click on the other user's profile pictures or names if they wish to visit their profile page →

Second page: shows the profile of another user, it is similar to the home page, but without the ability to add, edit or share habits. However the details of a habit can be viewed if a habit is clicked on, a tag is linked to each habit and it describes the habit's category

Notifications

Notifications

There are 4 upcoming tasks for today!

User x sent you a friend request

User y is now following you

Your new habit is now live

Congratulations on completing today's task

Notifications

By clicking on the "bell" icon in the bottom right corner, the user can get to this screen. This is a screen for receiving reminders and updates. There are various types of notifications that can be received by the user.

➔ It notifies the user that they can view their activity if a new habit is added or if the user performs an activity associated with that habit.

➔ It will notify the user about the number of tasks scheduled for the day.

➔ If another user sends a friend request, it will appear in the notifications page as well. When the friend request is clicked, a pop-up window appears with options to accept or deny the request.